The steamer had on board five million ball cartridges and other war material, including several pieces of artillery. The expedition was composed of one hundred refugee Cubans.

-The additional $450,000 of stock asked for by the Eagle and Phœnix Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Georgia, has all been taken. The stock has been taken, not only by capitalists, but in small amounts throughout the country. The purpose of the company is to erect another mill as large as the present one, in which are now running over 9000 spindles, and crowd it with machinery. The new building can be put up for much less than the present one. Before many months this immense establishment will have in operation some 20,000 spindles, consuming some twenty bales of cotton per day, and many thousand pounds of wool, and manufacturing a variety of goods.

-North Carolina, through her State historian, is making an appeal to the North for aid in developing the gold mines in that region, arguing that under a system of free labor and the skill and energy of Northern mechanics the mining enterprise of the State will be came from that region. Between 1804 an 1861, North Carolina furnished $9 113,994 of gold for coipage, of which $4,440,908 were sent to the Philadelphia Mint, and $4,520,731 to the mint established in 1835 at Charlotte. The whole amount produced in the interval of fiftyseven years mentioned is estimated at $12,000,-000. The balance of $3,000,000 not sent to the mint, it is stated, was used by jewellers, by whom it was preferred on account of its purity and fineness. The largest single nugget ever found in any part of the world, weighing twenty-eight pounds of pure gold, was found in Cabarras County, in 1803. The New York Herald of Friday says : "The market for Southern securities was higher and firmer yesterday, instancing the fact that our State bonds sympathize with government bonds and not with the miscellaneous stock list. North Carolinas were subjected to further manipulation to the interest of parties supposed to be connected with the State government. -The New York Times adds a chapter to the history of the withdrawal of the French troops from Mexico, which is generally believed to have been brought about in consequence of Mr. Seward's demand to the French Minister in December, 1865. The supplementary chapter, designed to show that the Emperor was not frightened into recalling his troops but had already decided upon that course from high motives of his own, is given upon the authority of General Webb, now Minister to Brazil. It appears from this statement that General Webb himself was the peacemaker, having secured from the Emperor a promise to withdraw, if he should not be threatened, as early as May, 1863. In November, 1865, he breakfasted again with the Emperor at St. Cloud, where the arrangement was made by which the French troops were to be called home in twelve, eighteen and twenty-four months. The arrangement was not to be disclosed to our minister in France nor to Mr. Seward; but Mr. Webb was to convey the intelligence to the President in person. After the arrangement had become known at the State Department, it is now alleged, the letter was written which appears on the record as the primary cause of the course of events during the next year. General Webb is of the opinion that his friend, the Emperor, has been scandalously treated in the matter, and avails himself of the first opportunity after Mr. Seward's retirement to set him right with the world. Mr. John M. Binckley publishes in the Washington papers of Friday, the following official report of his late engagement with Harland and "unpleasantness" with Rollins : Early Tuesday morning I unexpectedly saw Mr. E. A. Rellins advancing from the northeast corner of Willard's Hotel towards the opposite corner of F street. When about midway on the street crossing I advanced directly

THE DAILY NEWS. to meet him. I said not a word, but exchanged looks of recognition. When nearly within striking distance I threw aside my cloak) not my coat or hat) and my cane and raised my hand to strike. Mr. Rollins hesitated not a moment. Leaving the crossing he passed diagonally through the mud to the north side | as the Southern representative in the Cabof F street. From the instant I lifted my inet, a Marylander of that "trooly loil" hand Mr. Rollins ran like a rabbit, and I confess dog along F street and up Fifteenth for the distance of a square and a balf, endeavoring from the first step to catch him. I never heard his voice, nor was it possible for him to have made any gesture or motion but that of frantic and headlong flight. To suppress my voluntary resignation for the purpose of falsely converting it into a shameful expulsion from office would not alone have lifted Mr. Rollin's frequent slanders high enough for me to see them, but having contrived to get this one accredited to the world by the President of the United States, I have, as above set forth, signified, and Mr. Rollins has confessed its malice and its meanness. It may be proper to add that Friday was the only time for many years when I have had what the vulgar call a fight."

CHARLESTON.

MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 15, 1869.

Stock Jobbing in High Places.

After the close of the war the bills of the Bank of the State of South Carolina became almost worthless, notwithstanding that the State was said to be liable for them. The bills sold at 6, 8 and 10 cents on the dollar, and as late as last September could be bought at 12 or 15. At these prices, the bills were publicly said to have been bought up in large amounts by Governor Scott and other persons who controlled the State legislation, and the statement, as far as we know, was never denied. While the bills were still at a low price, an act was passed by the General Assembly which authorized the funding of certain classes of bills of the Bank of the State, in new bonds of the State, which the Governor was authorized and directed to issue. The exchange was to be made about January 1st, 1869, and the bills rapidly advanced in price until they touched 50.

At this time, late in December last, Governor Scott announced that he would not sign the bonds to be issued in exchange for the bills, there being in his mind a serious doubt as to the constitutionality of the act which authorized this to be done. The apparently disinterested conduct of Governor Scott was praised on all sides, although it was hinted that his sudden care for the interests of the State was determined by the circumstance that he had sold at between 40 and 50 all the bills which he had bought up at 8, 10 and 12 cents. This was looked upon as an ungenerous suggestion, and as Governor Scott stood firm, the bills tumbled in a few days from 50 to 20.

At this price the bills remained from about the first of January until Saturday last, when, without a word of warning, telegraphic advices were received that Governor Scott was actually issuing the new State bonds in exchange for the funded bills of the Bank of the State. No sign was given so that the holders of the bills might refrain from throwing them on the market. The public believed that the bonds would not be issued for months, if ever, and sold them revived. Mining operations were commenced at what they would bring; when presto! in North Carolina in 1804, and until 1827 all without a word to any one, the bonds are the native gold sent to the United States Mint | signed and the funded bills become worth etween 50 and 60.

Now we do not desire to throw any discredit upon the purity of the motives which controlled the action of the Governor of "South Carolina." Far be it from us even to hint that the whole transaction was a stock jobbing scheme, of which Governor Scott was the head and front. Not for a moment would we suggest that Governor Scott ran the bills up to 50, and ran them down to 20, and now runs them up to 50 again, so that he might sell bills at 50 which were bought at 10, and buy them back again at 20 to be sold once more at 50 or 60. But we must say that if Governor Scott had tried with all his might to convince the people that he was using his official position to make stock jobbing profitable, he could not have hit upon a better plan than his course in regard to the State bonds and the bills of the Bank of the State.

The South and the Administration.

The New York Herald, in a recent leading in the hope and expectation of a more stable, uniform and beneficial policy than "that which marked the administration of eyears, and under that impression, as we its respectable journals, it is prepared to go to work with renewed zeal and vigor.

There is no doubt that the South is ready to go to work with renewed vigor; but this is not on account of confidence in the new administration, but because the labors of last season were profitable on the whole, and because it is felt that work and its consequence-success, will enable the South to recover her political prestige, as well as to build up anew the private fortunes of her citizens. The Herald sees the effect, and, as usual, mistakes the cause; and whatever may be the opinions of the "respectable "journals" of which it speaks, we, at least, cannot see why the South should expect from President Grant "a more stable, uni-"form and beneficial policy" than that of his predecessor. It is true that there may be a sly joke in the Herald's sounding words. Stable may be a delicate reference to Grant's knowledge of horse fiesh and love of fast trotters. Uniform may mean that the whole administration will be one of sash, epaulette, shoulder strap and the articles of war. Beneficial may be an allusion to the benefits which Grant's personal friends,-Washburne, Stewart, Sherman, Sheridan, and the "military family," -are already enjoying as their share of his success. In this sense, the policy of the new administration may truly be Stable, Uniform and Beneficial. It is hardly probable, however, that the Herald would so soon laugh in the beard of its new idol. What, then, is there to cause the South to concur in the opinions of the Herald, and of the journalistic Mrs. Harrises of which it speaks?

was silent in regard to the South, which was left to draw its own conclusions from the actions of the new President. Then came the Cabinet appointments. These gave us no consolation, there being named, class with which our land is cursed. A with poor exultation that I chased him like a slightly uneasy feeling then arose, which was heightened by the new deal, and the nomination of Mr. Boutwell, the bitterest Radical of them all, as the Secretary of the Treasury in the place of Mr. Stewart. The first man in the Cabinet was the most extreme while the most able of the leaders of the Radical party. So far, then, the South had but few favors to expect.

And if there were some cheerful and confiding souls still willing to regard President Grant as one who would sink the soldier in the citizen, and devote his whole strength to the vindication of constitutional right and the majesty and dignity of the law, what consolation can they have found in the complexion of the President's household? GENERAL Badeau-Grant's Secretary. GENERAL Dent-master of the ceremonies. General Porter-maker of appointments. GENERAL Babcock-receiver of applications for office. General Rawlings, the former chief of staff, Secretary of War. This is a strong government with a vengeance. General! General! and nothing but General! A household, from top to bottom, more befitting a military dictator than the chief magistrate of a republic. And subsequent events give an additional proof that Grant will take care of his own, and that, if he may have his own way, the South, at least, is to be ruled according to West Point tradition and the pleasure of military commanders.

rival of General Grant for President, is banished to Dakets. Sheridan, the burning, devastating "Here of the Valley," is sent back to Louisiana to play the tyrant and bully if he can. Canby, the coldblooded, fanatical martinet, who was more detested in the Carolinas than his predecessor Sickles, takes the place of Stoneman in Virginia. Reynolds, whom the Texans know to their cost as a malignant traducer. returns to the command of Texas. Gillem, who did his duty faithfully in Mississippi, is ordered back to his regiment. There is but one reasonable interpretation of these changes, and it is that Grant is resolved that the South shall be punished for her dislike of his favorite generals, and that military orders shall, as far as possible, supercede the laws of the land.

There is no breadth, no largeness, in anything that Grant has done. There is spite, as in the unwarrantable revocation of pardons granted by President Johnson, and in the banishment of the gallant Hancock. There is snobbishness, as in his behavior n the church at Washington. There is vindictiveness, as in returning to the South men who are justly disliked and despised. There is weakness, as in his rapid change of front in the Cabinet, when, as the late Mr. Lincoln would have said, "it was no "time to swap horses." But there is no sign of enlarged views or broad comprecarry out his own programme of approaching the great questions of the times without "prejudice, hate and sectional pride," or in any way to do his part in giving us a lasting peace. In saying again that the South has n expectation of "a more stable, uniform and beneficial policy" than that of the last four years, we do not, however, feel that there is any doubt as to our rapid progress in developing our natural resources and increasing our natural trade. As long as the South can dig out of the ground annually two hundred and fifty millions of dollars, she is not at the mercy of any one man or set of men. Money and Union are our weapons, offensive and defensive. With these we may defy the Radical legions, and build up on their ruin the fabric of our future greatness. Our strength increases every day. Each dollar that we gain is an addition to our power. Every bour brings us nearer to the dawn of the new day of liberty, prosperity and truth

The Appropriation Bill.

We print, this morning, the appropriation bill for the current year. It calls for s total amount of $881,642, including $329,000 for interest on the State debt. In the year article, says: "The South is now indulging ending October 1, 1867, the expenditures were $474,458, exclusive of interest on the debt; while the present bill asks for $552, 642, exclusive of Interest. This is a mode-"the government for the four previous rate demand, and one that the State can bear. Before the war, we believe, the "judge from the satisfaction expressed by State expenditures were about $700,000 per sunum in gold.

Hon. James Guthers, whose death is anneunced in our telegraphic columns of this morning, was one of the leading men of Kentucky. He was born near Bardstown, Kentucky, December 5th, 1792, and commenced his career at twenty years of age, as the owner of flatboats on the Mississippi. He afterwards became a lawyer and poli tician, and served in the State Legislature for fifteen years, first in the lower and afterwards in the upper House. He was also a prominent banker and railroad man, and was the originator and first President of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad. He was Secretary of the Treasury under President Pierce, and in 1865 was elected United States senator from Kentucky, which position he resigned in 1868, on account of his feeble health.

WE see that the act to regulate the liquidation of banks has been signed by the Governor. This act, as originally drawn, compelled the State banks to wind up their business within sixty days. In consequence, however, of representations made by Colonel A. O. Andrews, on behalf of our mercantile community, the time allowed was extended until the first of December next, in which form the bill has become a law.

WE HOPE that President Grant and the South Carolina "Congressional delegation" will read the resolutions adopted by the "indignant Republicans," printed in our Columbia correspondence. When they have read them they will better understand what The inaugural address of President Grant | their duties and responsibilities are.

RE NOW MANUFACTURING THE ABOVE WELL-KNOWN FLOUR, which is put up ESPE A RE NOW MANUFACTURING THE ABOVE

WILL-KNOWN FLOUIR, which is put up ESPECLALLY FOR THE "OUTHERN MARKETS.

The preparation used in the manufacture of this Flour is that invented and patented by Professor E.

N. He sford, of Cambridge, Mass., to whom the following was written by the celebrated Baron Liebig, whose reputation as a chemist and man of science is world-wide, in reference to this preparation: EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM BARON LIEBIG, OF

[EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM BARON LIEBIO, OF GEBMANN, TO FROFESSOR HORSFORD.]

"I have, through a great series of experiments, satisfied myself of the purity and excellence of your Bread Preparation. The bread has no acid, is easily digested, and of the bettaste. Aside from the conveniences this invaluable idea of yours has provided, I consider this invantion as one of the most useful pifts which science has made to mankind. It is certain that the nutritive value of flour will be inc eased ten per cent, by your phosphotic Bread Preparation; and the result is precisely the same as if the fertility of our wheat fields had been increased by that amount. What a woonderful result is this!"

In addition to which it can be said in its fevor that In addition to which it can be said in its favor that

In addition to which it can be said in its favor that the preparation is not a new one, but having been used by one of the most extensive firms in the City of New York for a period of eight years, during which time it has been proved to be not only beneficial in its action upon the human system, but that it is the only preparation of the kind of which this can be said.
